Prisoner Breaks Jail.
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
LEXINGTON, Va., September 9.—George Johnson, colored, convicted of burglary and given two years in the penitentiary, escaped this afternoon from the Lexington jail. Within two hours bloodhounds were on his trail, but the fugitive has not been captured.

Johnson was in a steel cage, when a lawyer called his cellmate to talk with him, and Johnson slipped out and remained in the cell until 4 o'clock to-day, when he walked out the front door of the jail and took to his heels.

Johnson is about thirty-five years old, and is an old offender. He is a native of Lexington, but of late years has been a criminal in Ohio, escaping from prison there.

MURKLAND FARM IS SOLD.
BY STATE HOSPITAL BOARD
[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
LYNCHBURG, Va., September 9.—The Murkland Farm, comprising 180 acres, which is located on the Albemarle Heights, across the James River from the city, has been sold by the General State Hospital board to Ernest Williams, of this city, who has turned the property over to the Chamber of Commerce to dispose of it for the benefit of the State epileptic colony in Amherst County, which, however, was not located on the Murkland property, as it was not suitable for that purpose.

Ten years ago S. R. Murkland's will left the property to the Western State Hospital to provide added comforts for epileptics at that institution. Out of this grew the State epileptic colony in Amherst County, which, however, was not located on the Murkland property, as it was not suitable for that purpose.

SUPREME COURT HEARS NEWSPAPER TANGLE

Arguments Are Presented in Consolidated Affairs of Consolidated News and Record.

POLITICAL FIGHTS REVIEWED

Property Now in Hands of Receiver Under Order of Judge Ker, From Which News-Register Company Appealed—Neither Will Sell.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
STAUNTON, Va., September 9.—The Virginia State Supreme Court of Appeals heard arguments to-day in the celebrated Harrisonburg newspaper controversy. A history of the political fights in Rockingham County, and the much-tangled newspaper difficulty was fully aired. The attorneys brought out that the Daily News was established in 1903. In 1911 the paper made a fight on George P. Kezel, who was a candidate for treasurer.

Mr. Kezel and his friends organized a company during the campaign, securing a charter under the name of the Rockingham Publishing Company, and began the publication of the Daily Record. It is said that neither of the papers proved a successful financial venture, and they consolidated. The management of the consolidated paper was put under the control of R. B. Smythe, of the Daily News, and Mr. Kezel, of the Daily Record. They published it under the name of the Daily News-Record. This association of the two papers continued until December, 1914, when friction arose between Kezel and Smythe and their respective partisans and backers. This friction grew out of a fight for the control of the Federal patronage in that section of the State and certain editorials written by W. J. Showalter, its editor. Their differences continued with more or less acuteness until last April, when the Rockingham Publishing Company filed a bill before Judge Holt, of the Rockingham Circuit Court, praying for an injunction to remove Smythe and Showalter from any connection with the paper. To this bill the News-Register Company and Smythe filed an answer and demurrer.

The defendants in this action claimed that the contract entered into in 1913 was null and void. Their contention was upheld by Judge Holt. Shortly thereafter the Rockingham Publishing Company presented another bill to Judge Ker, of the Corporation Court of Staunton, asking that a receiver be appointed to take over the affairs of the consolidated company. Judge Ker overruled the demurrer of the defendant company, and appointed a receiver.

From this decree the News-Register Company appealed to the Supreme Court, and the arguments were submitted to-day.

The situation is made all the more complex because each of the owners positively refuses to sell out to the other.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
ASHLAND, Va., September 9.—The eighty-fourth session of Randolph-Macon College opened to-day, with a very large number of matriculates. Announcements were made in regard to the classification of the old men and the freshmen, and all rules regulating the students were presented to the freshmen.

Classes will start promptly on Saturday morning. In the meantime the men will be arranging their rooms preparatory to the long grind until Christmas.

Men are arriving on every train, and the new Branch Memorial Dormitory has been completely filled, and from all appearances the number of matriculates will break all records. Most of the men are from Virginia, with a few from about a dozen other States.
